WILLIAM H. WEATHERSBY

Professor W. H. Weathersby

HERE is no more difficult task assigned to the literary artist than to reflect perfectly an episode or the true characteristics of the subject of a biographical sketch. The difficulty arises from the impossibility of being able to discriminate in his various activities between those into which he himself, in his own thinking, has poured the purest stream of his nature, and those of lighter emphasis. However, the difficulty is somewhat mitigated, in circumstances, where a teacher undertakes to reflect, in a short sketch, a true portraiture of his student or colleague. The subject of this sketch sustaining each of these relations, the task, become lightened, has been cheerfully undertaken.

In the childhood activities of Professor Weathersby, he was possibly just as naive and as artless as the average child, but of course displaying to his parents marks which they even then knew would develop into qualities of large dimensions. We note with pleasure that the interpretations of his fond parents are being fulfilled as rapidly as the passing years will guarantee.

In 1897, at the age of seventeen years, the lad entered the Sophomore class in Mississippi College. The day of all days, is the day on which a boy enters college. At first his work may not exhibit a discriminating balance of strength, intellectuality, and passion, but the earnestness displayed and the integrity of pursuit, at once marks him, and in proportion as he catches a true glimpse into the purpose of the college course, the character of his destiny will become outlined. The young man in the very beginning swung out into the real direction of college values, so in June, 1900, on commencement day he proudly carried with him his diploma bearing the words, "First Honors."

It would be a sad day for Mississippi College, if she should send out sons divorced from the ideals of altruism and service holding as unimportant, the social, economic, and civic life, and caring naught for the underlying principles of the daily vocations, politics, and education. On the contrary it is a fortunate college that is able to emphasize and develop in the student a true conception of his relation to the problems of his community, state, and nation.

Mr. Weathersby caught the vision and began his life's activities as a teacher, following successfully this vocation five years—one at Tylertown, and four at Little Springs.

The teacher's work is not confined altogether to the classroom, but the pedagogic element is found on the forum, in the pulpit, and in the editor's chair. In 1905, Mr. Weathersby left the school room, to take upon himself the arduous task of managing and editing the South Mississippi, located at Brookhaven.

Newspaper work did not prove congenial to the ambitions of the young man, though out of it he had reaped a most profitable experience. He longed to come in closer touch with young men than was possible with the cold type, so in 1907, he came to Mississippi College where he has proven himself as one of the strong forces in the work of developing the usefulness of his alma mater. His work in the college was confined to the department of English, until two years ago, he was made Professor of Pedagogy.

Professor Weathersby's habits as a student in college were but an earnest of his manhood practices. He accepts no compromise in his own intellectual demands, and in his work with his classes, he is no less rigid. He has no patience with that indulgence which leads to weakness. His students realize and appreciate this, and they know that whatever he demands is not in him a bit of selfishness, but purely an altruistic desire to be their greatest benefactor under the circumstances.

Mr. Weathersby, realizing that a man cannot attain to his full possibilities without the sympathies and assistance of a wife, because it takes her refining influence to deepen and stabilize his better nature, and to interpret properly that factor in the equation of life "which transcends philosophic definition," in 1905, was united in marriage to Miss Mary Conerly, charming in personality, cultured in manners, and consecrated in soul. From this happy union were born four children. After thirteen years of ideal wedded life, on August 27th, 1918, Mrs. Weathersby fell asleep in death, leaving a great host of friends to mourn her untimely departure and to sympathize with her bereaved husband and children.

Professor Weathersby has been an untiring student and has about finished his residence work at the university for his doctorate. It is his purpose to take his degree during the coming summer.

THE PSALM OF A STUDENT

The Professor is my shepherd: I shall always be in want.
 Me maketh me to pore over my examinations; he leadeth me into chill failures.
 He tormenteth my soul; he leadeth me into brutal technology for his fame's sake.
 Yea, though I come barely living from thy horrid exam.,
 I am no better off, for thy frown still haunteth me;
 Thy tyranny and thy cruelty they discomfort me.
 Thou preparest trouble for me in the so-called "After-Life:"
 Thou makest me useless toil; mine eyes run sore.
 Surely evil and failure will haunt me all the days of my life
 If I dwell in the sway of the Professor forever.

Made Safe for the Voyage

Now we set sail on the world's great sea,
To face the storms and winds that be,
Storms of temptation will come we know,
Winds of doubt will blow and blow.

Rage on, Temptation! Blow on old Doubt!
The light that we have will never go out.
'Tis founded and grounded, safe and secure
Christian Education safe ever more!

Four years of learning, learning three fold,
A training of mind, body and soul
Will make us safe on the seas that roar
Till our ships cast anchor on the Golden Shore.

Senior History

THE Senior Class of 1919 has withstood the storms and vicissitudes of the most momentous period in the world's history. We have been in college during a time that has tried the souls of men and of nations. It has been hard oftentimes to concentrate upon the work before us. But mindful of our future duties, and with a desire to attain unto the highest usefulness to our fellow man, we have faithfully inclined our ears unto wisdom and earnestly applied our hearts to understanding.

We are comparatively small in numbers, but strong in spirit. We have PEP, and lots of it! War has diminished our number, but has increased our enthusiasm. During our brief stay at Mississippi College we have entered whole-heartedly into every student activity and have acquitted ourselves well. The class of '19 has not been victorious in every contest, but its laurels are numerous and its records gilded with honor.

Of one hundred and forty green, but promising Freshmen who entered the portals of Mississippi College in the fall of 1915, only eight are left to tell the tale. Some have fallen by the wayside; others have spurred up and finished ahead of their old classmates. Many have given themselves to the service of their country and some of these have been sacrificed upon the altar of the grim god of war. The ranks of the Senior Class of '19 are composed largely of men who, under the pressure of circumstances, have completed their work in three years and others who, having entered before their contemporaries, found it necessary to remain out of college for a time.

The class of '19 has made a contribution to Uncle Sam not only in the persons of our absent comrades, but also in those of our own number. Of the twenty-nine men who receive their diploma in June more than fifty per cent have seen service in the army and the navy of the United States, four of whom were fortunate enough to win their spurs.

We are stepping out into life's activities when the world is crying for real men and leaders of men. History has offered no greater opportunity to young men of vision and ambition. That the members of the Class of '19 of Mississippi College will seize this great opportunity and climb high in world affairs, listen to the voice of the Prophet.

—The Historian.

Senior Phophecy

VISIONS appear to many of us very frequently, as we pass quietly through the land of Nod; such visions are of no interest to us, for we can never find one who is able to give us a correct interpretation.

Lately appeared to me a vision and many hours did I sit at my table with this question before my mind, "What is the meaning of such a dream?" One night during my quiet hours of meditation, came one, from whence I know not, but such a one was able to see beyond the veil of the immediate present into the glorious future.

In my eagerness to find the meaning of my dream, there came from within the sound of a still small voice saying, "Ask of the Stranger the meaning of such a dream." This is what I told to the Most Powerful One for the interpretation thereof:

"I dreamed I was standing on a peak of a mountain, much further out in space than any mountain of our present world. I was not yet able to see very clearly the things about me.

"I secured the use of a periscope and adjustments were made, such as enabled me to see very clearly the things about me. There were many wonderful scenes, and nature and the architecture were very beautiful.

"While standing on the mountain top, peering through the periscope turning first to right, then to left, were to be seen men of all callings in life, each one facing his duty.

"The first scene that impressed me was one in a court room. The trial must have been one for murder, judging from the looks of the people. Several lawyers made their argument, then came a last one. A very insignificant looking man, but by his oratory and keen wit, he completely magnetized the court room. He got the sympathy of people and when he had finished his speech the people were shedding tears. On the lapel of this man's coat was worn a golden '19.

"Looking out over some of our largest cities were found many doctors. Some of the most distinguished among them were those whose coats were decorated with the golden '19.

"The hour growing late we were forced to hurry through the remaining walks of life, but in each profession, we found those wearing a golden '19. I said to my strange visitor, 'What meaneth this?'

The strange one answering, said: "There went out from the Athens of Mississippi, better known as Clinton, a band of representatives of all callings in life, who are serving in defense of country and democracy. Those whom you have seen in the various walks of life, wearing the golden '19, which is considered by them a badge of honor, are men who graduated with the class of '19.

"That which means most for the Class of '19, is that they carry always with them this saying: 'Tis better to be called good than to be called great.'"

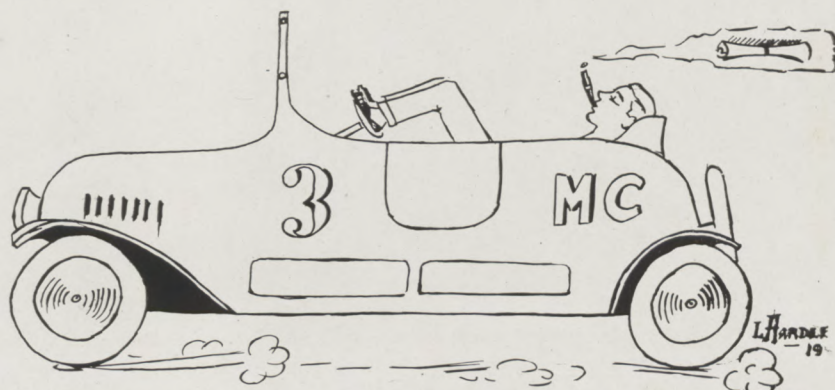

Our Morning Gas Attack

The bell had tolled and summoned
 Us up to the Chapel Hall,
 'Ere we viewed the overspreading
 Cloud of obnoxious gas and gall!
 It sounded like an engine
 On the G. & S. I. track
 When we sat almost stifled
 From our morning gas attack.

Brother Heflin was on the rostrum,
 On his face he wore a grin,
 Which from his sparkling eyes descended
 All way down his stream-line chin!
 Then the gas shot out in torrents,
 Would it never, never slack?
 With patience tried, we stood it!
 Our morning gas attack!

Sophomore Class Poem

"A RETROSPECTION"

When a poet writes a poem
 He must have some inspiration—
 Deep down in his strange sad heart
 There must be a conflagration.
 Yet what about a dull class poem
 Arouses this dormant power?
 I must not verse on a maiden's face
 Nor the purity of some flower.
 The oasis of my life so far,
 Has been my college days,
 However difficult the task,
 To assume a scholars ways.
 And then in days when I am old
 I'll retrospect with joy—
 To those merry happy days I spent
 As a Mississippi College boy!

Freshman Poem

Our first year in college
Is a year of wonders.
While acquiring knowledge
We're overcoming blunders.

Each professor we meet
Gives splendid advice
As how to be neat
And how to be nice.

We Freshmen need lectures
By professors 'tis true—
But Sophomore conjectures
Are dreaded like "flu."

Yet we're a banner class,
Having plenty of brawn.
If exams we successfully pass
Then brighter hopes will dawn.

OUR HEROIC DEAD!

By A. J. Aben

Democracy and Freedom's sole defense,
Against onslaught Autocracy would wage,
Was men imbued with Duty's lofty sense,
Who, with their blood, wrote hist'ry's golden page.
The world made safe for righteous dwelling place.
Required brave men and God Almighty's grace.

To us with outstretched hands the Allies cried,
"Come now! Come now! if we would win and live!
For Armageddon must our fate decide!

Last throb of life now beats, except you give
Your consecrated strength against the wrong,
And crush invading, ruthless, massive throng!"

This service call our fellows bravely heard.
With promptitude and joy they sprang to arms,
Those college lads with feelings deeply stirred,
Full breasted stood against the Hun's alarms.
The path to death they chose with buoyant tread,
And thus "made way for Liberty," though dead!

Sacred to the memory of the Mississippi College men who have died in the service of their country.

Historical Sketch of the Philomathean and Hermenian Societies

W. H. WEATHERSBY AND D. M. NELSON

THE Philomathean Society was organized October 16, 1846, while Mississippi College was a Presbyterian institution. J. D. Ford was the first president, and T. N. Todd, the first secretary. After the college passed under Baptist control, the first meeting of the society was held November 29, 1850, with twelve members. One of this number, George Granberry, was the first graduate of the college.

Realizing the need of another literary society in the college, Captain W. T. Ratliff withdrew from the Philomathean Society in 1854 and with four other students organized the Hermenian Society. The organization was effected on April 26th with Captain Ratcliff as secretary and A. J. Wise as president.

A year later the catalogue contained the following statements relative to the two societies:

"The two Literary Societies, the Philomathean and the Hermenian, are in efficient operation. Students learn to bring to practical use what they gather from textbooks, lectures, and readings. In addition to their theoretical knowledge they here acquire the art of arguments and detecting sophistry on logical principles, and of influencing the emotions and waking the passions, not only according to the rules of Rhetoric, but according to the laws of the human mind."

Both societies continued their work until the early part of 1862, when the conditions growing out of the Civil War made it necessary for the Philomatheans to suspend. The Hermenians seem to have continued their work without interruption. In 1870 the catalogue states that "Of the two literary societies the Hermenian is in active operation and the Philomathean will be reorganized the next session."

From early times the two societies in co-operation have published a magazine or college paper. The first publication was announced in the catalogue of 1870-71, the first issue to appear during commencement week of that session. The periodical was called The Mississippi College Star. The last reference to The Star is found in the catalogue of 1873, in an appeal to friends of the societies to aid in increasing the circulation of the paper. The subscription price was fifty cents. By 1883 the societies had come down to earth for the name of their luminary, and were publishing The Electric Light. J. H. Anderson for the Hermenians and J. P. Williams for the Philomatheans were the editors. The Mississippi College Magazine began its long career as the society publication during the session of 1888-89, with F. L. Riley of the Hermenian Society as editor-in-chief. This publication was continued with brief interruptions until three years ago, when it was supplanted by The Mississippi Collegian.

The two societies are justly proud of their long history as nurseries of oratory. For nearly twenty years, beginning with the commencement of 1877, it was customary for the societies to have an "annual exhibition" during commencement week, for which each society selected several speakers. The custom of holding the fall orations, on which occasion each society is represented by one orator, apparently began in the fall of 1876. The chief gala occasion of the societies, however, has always been their anniversary celebration. The first anniversary of the Hermenian Society was held in 1855, probably on July 12th. The catalogue of that year states that the Hermenian Anniversary came regularly in the "second week of July, commencement week." The Philomatheans had established the custom of celebrating their anniversary before the organization of the sister society, the celebration being held regularly in February. About 1870 the date for both anniversaries was moved to the month of April.

In the tables appended to this sketch the writers have attempted to give a list of the speakers on the annual oratorical occasions of the two societies from 1875 to 1918. The record is not quite complete, and there may be a few inaccuracies. The first speaker in each group under the head of anniversary speakers was the anniversarian, and the first, second, and third orators follow in order. The central column is given to the speakers at the annual exhibitions until 1893. After that date it is given to the chief editor of the Mississippi College Magazine, for such years as the data could be secured.

DESPITE the fact that we did not put out a real college team this season, on account of the S. A. T. C. work, we had a real good "Prep" team (as it was known) by the boys that were not in the S. A. T. C. They had an old last year Varsity man for their coach and did some of the real work of a college team. Their games were with the best Agricultural High Schools of Mississippi, and they were victorious over all. In this team are some good prospective men for next year's machine. The team was composed mostly of new men and should make stars in the next few years. There was always plenty of "pep" in the team and each man had a word of encouragement for the man at his side.

Upon our field next season is going to be one of the best machines that has ever been put out in this state. We have the goods already. We will have one of the best coaches in the South, and with the old men back and the new men that are coming, there will be no better machine in the state.

Our Team

Basketball

OUR basketball team has made a unique record, winning all the games of the first of the season and did not meet defeat until it struck A. & M. the latter part of the season. Nevertheless, it has been a star aggregation and stands out as second best in the state. The great handicap of the season was that we were without a coach, and also the members of the team had never before played together, but soon showed their ability and with practice under the guidance of Manager Saunders and Captain Adams, a winning team was whipped into shape. Opening the season with the nearby teams, Mississippi College started out with a string of seven victories to their credit and it seemed as if we were on a straight and easy road to the championship until we encountered A. & M. Yes, we got beat, but the fight we put up at the "Grand Ole" will be remembered "till the ripples of time break on Eternity's Wall." Never was there a game played that the M. C. boys did not have the "ole pep" and stickability about them, and was always there on the spot when needed to interfere with the other team's progress. Our three forwards, Saunders, Parks, and Russell, scored 378 points, which is more than all the opposing teams made in twelve games. Barnett at center was always to be counted on and dropped the ball in from all angles of the court. Adams, Eure, Bush, and Jackson could always be counted on to give their forwards as much trouble, if not more than any guards in the state, and were always in for a little scoring besides. Of the eight men to play Varsity ball this year, Adams, Eure, Barnett, Jackson, Bush and Russell will be back next year. Saunders will receive his diploma this year and will not be back for further work. A wealth of good material will be on hand for the next year's team and it will be no surprise to see as good, if not better team on the ground in 1920.

Baseball

WE have five of the last year's team back with us and with the material now at hand, we are looking forward to one of the best teams in the history of the school. Each day the men are fighting desperately for a place on the team. The team will be as good a fielding team as last year's and a much better hitting one, of which is already proven from the early practice. The management feels that this is the year to make a reputation in baseball and we look at the schedule Coach Miles has arranged of which gives all a splendid opportunity.

Our Coach is an old head at putting out winning teams and what it takes to get the best out of the men, he happens to have it. He is known all over the South as a real baseball man. He has planned some real trips, and every man is trying his best to be the best in that he will go. There are only a few certainties, so most of the positions are to be fought for and in many cases, the choice is rather doubtful. Each day a new man comes out 'cause he thinks he is better than someone that is playing, thus keeping every man working hard, and a lots of "pep" in each man. Each man that plays on the team realizes that he has to keep going at his best or lose to another. "The rousing group meeting" of the team that is seen on the field every afternoon pleases the eyes of the onlooker very much, for they realize that they are backing a real team.

On, Read On!

You've sailed mid billows of silly sooth
O'er pictures and o'er prose,
I speak not as one with random word,
I speak as one who knows.
Oh! Do not stop but read our ads,
Lest your attention shall have gone!
Your eyes will not view frills or fads
So then read on! Read on! Read on!

I fear lest you most tired have grown,
From gazing at our faces—
In which I'm sure there was not shown
A chain of lovely traces!
But altho weary you may be
Let once more your interest dawn.
Accept this closing word from me
Read on! Read on! Read on, and on!

LADIES DO NOT READ

If there's anything worries a woman,
It's something she oughtn't to know:
By golly, she'll find it out somehow,
If she gets the least sign of a show.
Now we might say something real shocking
If these lines would never be read,
But we know she'd get at 'em somehow,
If she had to stand on her head.

HILLMAN COLLEGE

For Young Ladies

CLINTON, MISS.

W. T. LOWREY, D.D., LL.D., President

WHERE can a better place be found for our Baptist boys than at Mississippi College at Clinton, the place from which come our leaders, religious, political, educational and professional, the place where great characters are built.

Clinton is a good place for the young men. Why not for the young ladies as well? At Hillman, four blocks from Mississippi College, the young women are brought up with largely the same influence that Mississippi men have. They attend the same religious services, the same social entertainments, the same Lyceum attractions, and come in contact with the same great leaders.

Hillman offers exceptionally good advantages in Piano, Voice, Expression, Domestic Science and Literary work. The fact that the Colleges are near together makes it desirable for Mississippi College men to have their sisters at Hillman. Tell the young ladies about Hillman. Have them write for information to

M. P. L. BERRY, Vice-President, or DR. B. G. LOWREY, Field Secretary.

Attention, Young Man!

The man with a college or university education has one chance in forty-two to become prominent?

The man with a high school training has one chance in 404?

The man with a common school education has one chance in 812?

The man without an education has no chance at all?

One trained man can do the work of many untrained?

And that it means money in your pocket for you, if you get the RIGHT KIND OF TRAINING?

Our business is training young men and women in the principles of business—making expert Stenographers, Bookkeepers, etc., out of them so they will be able to take their place in the business world—and take that place PREPARED—prepared to render EFFICIENT SERVICE and to ACCEPT PROMOTION from time to time.

“WHAT of tomorrow?” is the problem of every thinking man and woman.

Yesterday is past—today is here—tomorrow comes the reckoning. Young men and women do not want an education that fails to solve the problem of “making a living”—of attaining happiness in life. A storehouse of knowledge is of no value if it fails to provide a livelihood. Of what use is it if it has no practical application to business affairs—if it cannot be turned to good use in the necessary affairs of life?

The proper business education chooses and teaches those facts essential and useful to the daily life of those who acquire it. One who will master our course and then diligently apply it to the best advantage and to the interest of the business with which engaged has the keynote to practical education that cannot and will not fail so long as the learner has ambition to succeed.

It will profit YOU to secure a business training in this practical and successful school of business.

“If a man is anxious that his son should go into business, and begin work on a practical basis, he should not send him to the University, but to a Business College.”—Woodrow Wilson.
